About Aurangabad

About Aurangabad Tourism
Aurangabad, better known as the City of Gates or the Heart of Maharashtra, is one of the 35 districts of Maharashtra, covering an area of 10,100 km², out of which 141.1 km² is urban area and 9,958.9 km² is rural. Named after the Mughal Emperor Aurangzeb, it means “Built by the Thrones”

Nicknamed the Historical City, it was founded in 1610 A.D By Malik Ambar, Prime Minister of Ahmadnagar in the village Khadki. Malik Ambar had a strong love for architecture and that is how Khadki grew into an architectural hub and a populous city. When Malik Ambar died in 1626, he was succeeded by his son Fateh Khan who named it Fatehnagar. In 1633, Fatehnagar came under the possession of the Mughal, and in 1653, when Prince Aurangzeb wasn’t appointed the viceroy of the Deccan, he took Fatehnagar as his capital and renamed it Aurangabad. Aurangabad was a part of princely state of Hyderabad until 1956. In 1956 it became a part of newly formed bilingual Bombay state and in 1960 it became a part of Maharashtra state.

Aurangabad, one of the oldest cities in Maharashtra holds true to its traditions and culture. Although predominantly a Hindu state, a large part of the population also follows Islam. The culture in Aurangabad is taken after Hyderabad. It still retains a lot of the flavour and charm of the Muslim culture in the old city, which is especially reflected through the language and cuisine of the locals. Aurangabad cuisine is heavily influenced by Mughlai and Hyderabad cuisine. Meat cooked in spices and herbs as well as sweets play a major role in the local cuisine. Naan Qalia, a concoction of meat and varied spices originated in Aurangabad is a must try while in the city.

The city is brimming with famous historical attractions, like Bibi Ka Maqbara, Ajantha Caves, Ellora Caves, which have been named UNESCO World Heritage Sites, Jama Masjid, Panchakki, and the 52 gates in Aurangabad, to name a few. There are also a number of temples, mosques, museums, and even some gardens to explore.

Shopping for local textiles such as Paithani and Himroo, which are considered very characteristic and distinctive from the rest, along with ancient art forms such as Bidriware is a must in the old city. Streets like Nirala Bazaar situated in the heart of the city, Connaught Place, Paithan Gate, Osmanapura and Aurangapura are other major shopping areas in Aurangabad.

Aurangabad is well-connected by roadways, rail and airways. The Chikkalthana Airport, now a domestic and international airport, is 12 km from the city, while Aurangabad Railway Station comes under South Central Railway and is connected to Mumbai and Hyderabad on either sides and connects to major cities like Mumbai, Hyderabad, Nagpur, Pune, Kolkata, Delhi, etc. Also, there are good bus services available from most places to Aurangabad.

Great Historic Place

"October 15 sat 6. 30 am started the journey from Salem in okha express to Auranagabad on 16th sun reached the destination at 10. 30 checked in at holiday era hotel opp railway station had good lunch Maharashtra thali and took rest next day started our journey to daulatabad to see the great historic fort by the time we reached the top of fort got exhausted till after noon we spent our time there and from there next I went to ellora caves a beautiful place to see the rock cut caves should visit here just to know how they have cut rock to create temple and other structures there are totally 34 caves telling history and at the end a small waterfalls which would be big and beautiful in rainy season from ellora caves next spot we have to take bus to visit jain temple from there I travelled to the place were Aurangzeb and his children are buried the tomb from here I visited panchakki another famous historic place to see and get to know about this place panchakki is famous for the wheat flour chakki run by using water and not by power great technology of the Ancients I spent the day and returned back to my room on 18th morning went to ajanta caves which is 100kms from Aurangabad beautiful rock cut caves with full of painting that was history now day by day it's disappearing out of 25 caves only 5 caves are important to see as still painting are available remaining all we can just see how the caves are done down the caves is a beautiful waterfalls but can't go near the most important part is don't forget to see the view point of ajanta which is on the way to caves on the highway much before you reach it is a deviation from high way and a little of 8 kms inside, you will really see the beauty of how and were ajanta caves stand overall great historic places there are some other places near by like you can visit sani temple, shiridi, and other temple but did not have time has I had return ticket for 19th now iam on the train while writing this I boarded the rameshwarem exp back to Salem will reach on 20th by noon go see this place if you like history don't miss ajanta may near future it will only be history" - Nettikadan Biju, Salem, Oct 19, 2016

A historic city

"Aurangabad is one of the best tourist destinations in the state of Maharashtra. World heritage sites, Ellora and Ajanta Caves, are located near this city. Bibi ka Makbara and Daulatabad Fort are also worth a visit. Ellora caves are known for its sculptures. Kailash temple built in 757 AD by Rashtrakuta Kings, built by 10 generations for over 200 years, is an amazing sculpting miracle, a single big rock carved into a beautiful Shiva temple depicting lots of stories related with Lord Shiva. Ellora caves are around 30 km from Aurangabad city, a 40 minutes journey by cab. Grishneswar temple is one of the twelve Jyotirlingas, dedicated to Lord Shiva. Gentlemen are required to remove their Shirts, while entering the main shrine to worship the Shiva Linga. This temple lies just beside the Ellora Caves. Ajanta Caves too have an importance of their own being spectacular in the field of paintings and arts of the ancient Indian history. Ajanta Caves are around 100 km from Aurangabad city, a journey of around two and half hours by cab. Bibi ka Makbara is a failed attempt at replicating the Taj Mahala. Even then this place is worth a visit.

Aurangabad is not that a big a city. Finding a good restaurant to eat could be a problem especially for North Indians. I went to a restaurant called Naivedya, in Basil Nagar near Aurangabad railway station and found it to be very good. Food, desserts and service were good. Costs about 2000 rupees for 4-5 people.

I visited this place in monsoons in July and found the climate to be excellent for roaming around. There was rain sometimes and the weather was mostly cloudy with cool winds, apt for tourism. If you are visiting during this time, don't forget your raincoat or umbrella." - Bhanu pratap Singh, Jul 4, 2016

A more developed city-Aurangabad

"Aurangabad is a developed city in all respects. The main public roads in the city are widened but cleanliness is lagging in the main bus stand area especially near the bridge. The Sidharth park & zoo is working near the bus stand and it is maintained well. The main attraction is Beebi Ka Maqbara, the tomb of Dairas Banu Beegum, wife of Aurangaseb, constructed by their son in 1678. It is Taj Mahal model and is known as MiniTaj Mahal. The entire area is very large & it is maintained by Archeological Survey of India collecting Rs/- 10/-from visitors through entry tickets. The location is 3 km away from city & auto service is available. On the way to Ellora from Aurangabad at a distance of 8 kms I visited at Daultabad, the Deogiri fort & palaces. This palace was once the capital of India during the time of Tughlaq. This fort is a visiting place for tourists since it is historically important, The palace is on the top of a mountain peak & entrance is through the inside of the peak. At Ellora which is 29 km apart from city I visited the UNESCO heritage site Ellora caves. Total 34 caves are there out of which 1 to 16 is on one side of bridge & 17 to 34 on the other side. At the end Jain temple is also seen. These caves are rock cut architecture excavated out of the vertical face of the Charanandri hills.. These cave temples are very attractive fascinating & deserves appreciation to the architectural talents exercised through the various sculptures. Near to the caves is Grishneswar temple which is the last (12th ) jyothirlinga temple in India. All amenities & facilities are available at Ellora for visiting tourists. Another important attraction of Aurangabad is the UNESCO heritage site Ajantha caves which are 100 kms away from the city. Near to entrance gate Ajantha Visiting centre owned by Maharashtra Tourist Development Corporation also functions. Enough transport buses are available to reach this location. Charge Rs/-130/- I also visited Sirdhi which is 104 kms away from Aurangabad & got darshan of Sirdhi Sai. . Bus service is readily available to this temple. Tourists visiting Aurangabad must visit these historically important places." - Thulaseedharan Achary, Punalur, Nov 19, 2015

Good destination for chilling out

"Decent restaurant are available in the city, and Ajanta Ellora caves are the first attraction of the visitors. I found the city comparatively cleaner than Mumbai at least:) It has good historic places worth visiting. The places are from the time of Aurangzeb. Hence, the place is named as Aurangabad. Some of the places worth seeing are as follows, Ellora- is just 30 km from Aurangabad. The place is well known for its carved caves. Garden - with Musical Fountain show Paithan - is also close to Aurangabad and it is really a house of real traditional sarees called Paithani. The sarees are made of pure gold and silver zari. The ladies take 2 months to 2 years to hand-weave one sari. Depending on the work to be done on the saree. Bibi ka Makbara- can be called as a photo copy of the original Taj Mahal. Was worth looking at it though. Aurangzeb's kabar Daulatabad Paan Chakki - is an amazing place. It has a grindstone chakki that operates on the mechanism of hydro power. The grindstone is going on and on since years. With the powerful force of water. This is a classic example of intelligent engineering implemented and demonstrated by the great people lived ages ago. Some of the good Hotels to stay in area. Hotel Atithi - 3 star and Hotel Ravi Kiran - economical. Some good restaurants are That Baat and Bhoj. They serve traditional Rajasthani food. Overall. Aurangabad is a good place worth visiting once." - Himanshu Burewar, Hyderabad, Nov 7, 2015

A small hidden jewel in Maharashtra
"Aurangabad has many historic places that you should visit. Any History lover or Buddha, Shiva Devotee should visit this place. I visited the place in August which is a off season for tourists. The season to visit is from October to May.

The place is famous for Ajanta - Ellora caves, Bibi ka Maqbara, Daulatabad Fort, Grishneshwar Jyotirlinga Temple and many other places. Ajanta caves require a whole day to visit. Whereas Ellora caves, Daulatabad Fort, Grishneshwar Temple, Bhadra Maruti, Aurangabad Caves, Bibi ka Maqbara, Aurangzeb Tomb etc. can be visited within a day. So plan carefully before you go. If you are a Shiva devotee then Grishneshwar temple is a must for you. Also you should know that guys will have to remove their shirt before entering the temple. Ladies can go inside without any hassles. Panchakki is also a good place but less known.

While visiting this magnificent city, Go to Tara Panwala near Gopal Cultural Hall AKA Gopal Tea. This place is known for its variety of pan. Starting price from Rs. 10 till Rs. 5000. We tried almost 10-12 pan during our 2 days visit.

We spent a whole day for Ajanta caves. Its on the way to Jalgaon. Another day to visit Ellora caves, Grishneshwar Temple, Bhadra Maruti, Daulatabad Fort, Bibi ka Maqbara, Aurangabad Caves, Tomb of Aurangzeb etc.

This a worldwide popular destination for Ajanta Ellora caves. It's a small hidden jewel in Maharashtra that you must visit." - Nikunj Goradia, Mumbai, Aug 31, 2015
